PRODUCER, Spooked
SNAP JUDGMENT STUDIOS

Snap Judgment, an award-winning radio show and podcast (heard on over 400 NPR stations across the US and downloaded over two million times every month) is seeking a PRODUCER for its spin-off podcast, Spooked, a production of Snap Judgment Studios and Luminary Media.

We are looking for people who have love for the paranormal, ghost stories, and horror in all media. It is also helpful for applicants to understand the Spooked voice, have familiarity with the Spooked catalog, and a voracious appetite for talking about paranormal activity with listeners, freelancers, and beyond.

Based in downtown Oakland California (with all staff currently working remotely) the Spooked Producer is in charge of finding, pitching, and producing original stories for the show. The position is seasonal (now through October 31, 2021) and reports directly to the Lead Producer and the Executive Producers.

The salary has a range of $60,000 to $85,000, depending on experience. Applicants in the San Francisco Bay Area will be given priority – but depending on experience – qualified candidates working remotely, in the United States, will be given consideration.

We really like radio folk but will also consider applicants from outside of radio with strong narrative backgrounds. Filmmakers, magazine writers, novelists, poets, journalists, editors, and anyone with a highly tuned sense of story is strongly urged to apply.

Snap Studios producers are curious about the world, the people in it, and everything else.
